Create a database demo in MySQL and then create a table with two fields Username and Password.

Now you are supposed to write a jdbc program that can take input from user their username and password to store these data in table. After that you have to take input from user their username and password and then verify it whether the user with this login credential exists or not.

If the user exists then you have to print

Valid Username and Password!

Otherwise

Invalid Username and Password!